

ConnectedSign announces a major Digital Signage deployment at DeVry University powered by Navori Enterprise software

ConnectedSign, a leading integrator of Digital Signage systems has announced a major Digital Signage deployment at DeVry University campus locations across the United States. This digital signage network, based on the Navori Enterprise software platform, lets each campus easily customize content for each location. PCs running the Navori Player software ensure all content is displayed reliably across the entire network.

The ConnectedSign solution allows each DeVry campus to manage their own content while global content is available from the top level of the organization. Loren Bucklin, ConnectedSign President says, "The Enterprise solution has a top level administrator that can control all things while allowing each local manager to contribute content and perform changes as needed".

This configuration provides a highly efficient, multi-tiered administrative structure where global content is managed from a central office while control over local content is delegated to each campus.

The Navori Enterprise Digital Signage platform lets local managers operate their signage network using either a Windows Client or a Web browser.
